Twice nominated for the Astrid Lindgren Memorial Award (ALMA), Gaël Aymon has worked as an actor, scriptwriter, director and producer, and has taught drama to children and teenagers. A folk tale specialist, he has been writing picture books and novels for young people (and consenting adults!) since 2010.

Full of humanism, his books, written in a poetic or raw style, but always demanding, challenge. They have won numerous awards and been translated into Chinese, Korean, Romanian, Italian, Spanish, German, Brazilian, Mexican and Braille.

Whether supported by Amnesty International or acclaimed in the press, his works subtly deal with subjects as varied as equality, harassment, the construction of identity, ecology or love, in different literary genres: from contemporary realistic fiction to SF, Fantasy or Fantasy Thriller, via Romance or albums for younger readers. He places free will at the heart of his work, and advocates the importance of complexity and nuance, as well as fear, in children's books.

His approach to fairy tales is multi-faceted, highlighting their oldest versions or twisting them to question their modernity. His young adult novels are full of references, whether to the Grimm brothers, Perrault, The Wizard of Oz, Balzac's La Peau de chagrin, or legends long forgotten.

A tireless mediator of literature for young people, he has already met over 15,000 students in classrooms throughout France and the French-speaking world.
